

Agiltron Receives 2008 New England Innovation Award

May 8, 2008 – Last night at the Westin Hotel in Waltham, MA, Agiltron, Inc., a developer and manufacturer of optical components and systems, was presented with the 2008 New England Innovation Award from the Small Business Association of New England (SBANE).

In a hall packed with 500 people, President Jack Salerno accepted a plaque signifying their accomplishment. This prestigious award recognizes companies that not only conceive a new way of doing something, but have demonstrated the ability to turn ideas into reality. Agiltron was one of five companies selected from a field of 165 nominees through a series of three selection rounds by 30 judges who include leading attorneys, bankers, and accountants. Previous winners of this award are well known and successful companies including Staples, Ben & Jerry's, iRobot, Nantucket Nectars, and Zipcar.

All Agiltron employees share in this award for successful business innovation.
